

PRESS RELEASE

Laval, the 10th December 2017

Lactalis recalls some batches of infant nutrition products following the alert in France.

For some batches of infant nutrition products produced in France there is a suspicion of Salmonella Agona presence which could cause diarrhea and fever which is not to be underestimated at this age.

Despite the fact that all the batches exported were conformed to the local rules, Lactalis has decided to remove batches produced since the 15th of February 2017.

All the products are not concerned by this recall because they are produced in another industrial facility.

It's recommended not to consume these batches or, in case of absence of alternative, to boil the recombined milk during 2 minutes and bring back it at the consumption temperature.

Exceptional cleaning and disinfection measures are being taken to restart the production. Lactalis is truly sorry for the anxiety generated by announcement. French consumers could call our free number 0 800 120 120 to have more information.
